In the Clover Blossoms.

Let's rest here in Clover blossoms,
Vain regret and care will I keep!
Woo the sky with all its blue,
Shimmer of the sunshine, too!
Song of river, laugh of child,
Humblest thing that ever smiled;
Sleep the soul and bathe the feet
In the Clover blossoms sweet!

Let's forget all weary things!
Woo the blossom and the wings,
Where the bending azure meets,
Argosies of silver fleet!
All the world is full of joy,
Take it as a happy heart to find,
Fling its fever and unrest,
Down to the deep ocean breast.

Of life's yesterdays, Today
God's glad promises hold away,
In the river's rush and ken,
Of the happy heart of man!
Woo the sky with all its blue,
Shimmer of the sunshine, too!
Sleep the soul and bathe the feet,
In the Clover blossoms sweet!

Wading in the Clover sea,
We'll clasp hands with memory!
Let her lead us swift along
The golden chain of song;
Leaning, listening the refrain,
Of the robin's trill again!
Ah, the voices loved of yore,
Say not they will come no more!

Speaking with us as 'tis meet,
'Mid the Clover blossoms sweet,
They've forgot the angel's kiss!
Knowing only that we miss
Tender tones we call our own,
On the throne of love and home!
So we sleep our souls to-day,
In the blossoms o'er the way!
